15 Attend Them at
Rites at the Brick
Church Here

Miss Frances White Noble and DuBois Tangier Smith were married here yesterday afternoon in the Brick Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. Stanley E. Niebruegge of Lansdowne, Pa., performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Peter D. MacLean of St. James, L.I., and the Rev. Dr. D. Reginald Thomas, minister of the church.

Mrs. Smith is the daughter of Mrs. Francis Osborn Noble of New York and Wainscott, L.I., and the late Mr. Noble, who was a lawyer with the Union Carbide Corporation. She is descended from Jonathan Edwards and Roger Sherman. Her grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Leonard Edwards and the late Dr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Noble, all of New York.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Edward Henry Leighton Smith of St. James, L.I., and the late Mr. Smith. He is descended from Richard Bull Smith, founder of Smithtown, L.I., for whom his brother and best man, Richard Bull Smith, is named.

The bride wore a gown of white peau de soie and an heirloom veil of alençon lace. Her sister, Mrs. Stephen Potter, was matron of honor and Miss Elizabeth C. Hodges was maid of honor. The other attendants were Mrs. Joseph Liebler and the Misses Mary Alice Bartlett, Mary Alice Klein and Mary Ingraham Whitehead, who is a cousin of the bride. Margaret Hayes Noble, the bride's niece, was junior atten-

James L. Kauffman, 82, Dead; Lawyer Had Practice in Tokyo

James Lee Kauffman, the senior partner in the law firm of McIvor, Kauffman & Christensen in Tokyo, died Wednesday in Seibo Hospital, Tokyo. His age was 82.

An international lawyer for over 55 years, Mr. Kauffman, born in Columbia, Pa., dealt largely in corporation law.

He attended the Lawrenceville School and in 1908 received an A.B. degree from Princeton University. In 1911, he received his law degree, cum laude, from Harvard University where he was an editor of the Harvard Law Review.

Mr. Kauffman began his law practice in Lancaster, Pa., in 1911, the year he was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar. The following year he was admitted to the New York State bar.

He practiced here till 1913, when he became a founder of the Tokyo firm and then practiced in Tokyo till 1926. From 1913 to 1919 he was professor of English and American law at the Imperial University in Tokyo.

Honored by Japan

In 1919, he received the Japanese Order of the Sacred Treasury for his activities in promoting amicable relations between this country and Japan.

In Tokyo in the early 1930's, Mr. Kauffman was president of a Japanese subsidiary of the Fuller Construction Company, which, under his direction, built commercial buildings in Tokyo.

He was a practicing lawyer here from 1926 to 1951 and was a partner in the law firm of Patterson, Greenough & Day. He was formerly president of the Cosmopolitan Fire Insurance Company of New York.

In 1948, when our Government planned to make Mr.

Kauffman a member of an "economic cabinet" under the late Douglas MacArthur, then Supreme Commander of the Allied Powers in Japan. Mr. Kauffman went there and conducted an economic survey.

After Mr. Kauffman's return to this country and his report to the Government, critical of MacArthur's economic policies in Japan, the general, who had rejected the "economic cabinet" idea, refused, according to a relative yesterday, to let him return to Japan.

Mr. Kaufmann was unable to go back to Japan, the relative said, until after President Harry S. Truman had relieved the general of his Far Eastern posts in 1951.

Aided in Seoul Dispute

Mr. Kauffman practiced law in Tokyo from 1951 until his death. In 1955, a year-long dispute between the South Korean Government and foreign businessmen in Seoul, Korea, over taxes was settled by a compromise that was worked out by the South Korean Government and the U. S. Charge d'Affaires and Mr. Kauffman, representing the American Chamber of Commerce.

In 1958, he received the Japanese Order of the Rising Sun for his help in the economic rehabilitation of Japan after World War II.

He was formerly president of the American Council on Japan, Inc., which worked for good relations between the two countries.

His wife, Mrs. Ethel Cochran Kauffman, died in 1959. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. William C. Blind and Mrs. Robert Deutsch; a sister, Miss Elizabeth Kauffman, and four grandchildren.

A funeral service will be held at 10 A.M. next Thursday at the First Presbyterian Church, Lancaster.

ALLYN JAY MARSH, 71, OF RADIO TV REPORTS

Allyn Jay Marsh, vice president of Radio TV Reports, an advertising and communications service at 41 East 42d Street, died of a heart attack Wednesday in Southampton (L. I.) Hospital. His age was 71 and he lived in Quogue, L. I.

Mr. Marsh had been with the Columbia Broadcasting System for 38 years, retiring in 1960 as director of network program sales. Before joining C.B.S., he was briefly an advertising salesman for The New York Times. He became vice president of Radio TV Reports five years ago.

Mr. Marsh received a degree from Princeton University in 1918 and served as a Navy lieutenant aboard J. Pierpont Morgan's yacht Corsair during World War I. He was a member of Squadron A, the Sons of the Revolution, the Military Order of Foreign Wars and the Princeton Club of New York.

Two of his marriages ended in divorce. He leaves his third wife, the former Frances Wilmoughby, and two sisters, Mrs. Charles Fuller and Mrs. Joseph McCaddon.

LEE GARNETT DAY, EXPLORER, WAS 78

Retired Executive of General
Foods, Ex-Colonel, Dies

Special to The New York Times

CORNWALL, Conn., May 24 —Lee Garnett Day, explorer and Army officer, who was a retired executive of the General Foods Corporation, died here today in his home. His age was 78.

In 1915, Mr. Day and Alfred M. Collins of Philadelphia financed and led an expedition into unexplored parts of South America. The expedition left in February and returned at the end of April, having traveled 11,000 miles through Peru, Bolivia and Brazil. They were accompanied by representatives of Yale University and of the Field Museum in Chicago.

They returned with 10,000 feet of moving pictures of flora and fauna, a number of living animals for the New York Zoological Society (Bronx Zoo) and specimens of birds for the American Museum of Natural History.

Wild Llamas Studied

They studied the habits of the guanaco, the wild llama, at altitudes of up to 17,000 feet, and of the blood-sucking vampire bats. They were driven at times to subsist on monkey meat.

Mr. Day had retained an intense interest in natural history and in exploration since then and was a former director of the Explorers Club.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mason Day of New York, and a descendant of James Day, who settled in Virginia in 1621. He was a 1911 graduate of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University.

In 1916, he joined Squadron A of the New York National Guard, and saw service on the Mexican border. He subsequently served 18 months in France as an Army officer, rising to the rank of colonel and winning the Croix de Guerre, the Legion of Honor and the Distinguished Service Medal.

Returns to Army

He served as an aide to General of the Armies John J. Pershing, and was wounded in the Argonne-Meuse campaign. Between World Wars I and II Mr. Day was vice president in charge of Baker-Bennett-Day, Inc., a subsidiary of the General Foods Corporation. He retired from business life in 1940 and returned to the Army as a colonel and aide to Brig. Gen. John Reed Kilpatrick. He received the Legion of Merit for his World War II service.

Mr. Day and his brother, the late H. Mason Day, financed and directed the restoration of St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Smithfield, Va., which was built in 1632 and is believed to be the oldest Episcopal Church in the United States.

He and his late wife, the former Nancy Sayles, daughter of a wealthy Pawtucket, R. I., textile manufacturer, donated a mycology laboratory to Yale University for the advanced study of fungi. They also gave Cornell University the Microbiology Building of the Veterinary Virus Research Institute at Ithaca, and made many other important contributions to institutions devoted to the advancement of science.

Mr. Day leaves a daughter, Mrs. Lee Day Gillespie of Concord, Mass., and six grandchildren.

There will be a service for him at 2 P.M. on Sunday at the First Congregational Church here in Cornwall.

Services at Walter D. Cooke, 2135 Westchester Ave., Bronx, Sunday, 8 P.M. Funeral Monday, 11 A.M. Interment Woodlawn Cemetery.

Anton Trunk, 82, Dies in Spain; Had Led Real Estate Brokers

Anton L. Trunk, Manhattan real estate broker and past president of the Real Estate Board of New York died yesterday in Madrid at the age of 82. He was vacationing in Spain with his wife, the former Clara Poey. His office was at 25 West 43d Street and his home, in New Rochelle, N. Y.

Mr. Trunk was known in the real estate world as Tony Trunk. In 1941 he was given credit for consummating the "biggest real estate deal of the year" while sick in bed.

The deal involved property at Broad and Wall Streets that formed an L around the "J. P. Morgan corner" at 23 Wall Street. The sale was by the Mills Estate to the Chase National (now Chase Manhattan) Bank. The land was then valued by the city for tax purposes at $6,300,000. It was occupied by a 36-story building in which the Chase Bank had offices. The building was assessed at $9,100,000, making the whole property worth $15,400,000.

"A rather sizable transaction for a broker to bring to a close from a bed in a Connecticut hospital," a real estate writer for The New York Herald Tribune commented.

Mind-Dominated Body

It was only one of a number of deals Mr. Trunk closed during his illness. In fact, he was heard to remark that it was "the best six months' business I've had in many years."

His physicians had told him he must remain absolutely quiet and clear his mind of every business detail. But he said the Mills deal interested him because of the complex problems to be solved.

Through telephone calls and letters to lawyers, bank officials and members of the Mills family, he finally completed the negotiations. He lost 54 pounds during the closing period. "But it was one time in my life when I was determined that mind would dominate the body, and it did," he said.

Mr. Trunk was born in Bridgeport, Conn. He was a secretary-governor of the Real Estate Board in 1925 and 1926, vice president in 1932 and president for the two succeeding years. Like other board presidents, during his term he wrote to the Mayor to denounce assessment reductions as "meager" and "unsatisfactory" and to protest tax increases in even more scathing terms.

Mr. Trunk had belonged to a number of clubs here and was still active in business. His widow has long been president of the Committee for the Rehabilitation of Crippled Children.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete last night.

Alfred F. Loomis of Yachting, 77, Columnist and Lecturer, Is Dead

Participated in Major Ocean Races Here and Abroad, Usually as Navigator

Alfred Fullerton Loomis, an internationally known writer and lecturer on yachting and a participant in ocean racing in many parts of the world, died of cancer yesterday in Doctors Hospital. He was 77 years old.

Mr. Loomis was probably best known for his writing in Yachting, to which he had contributed a monthly article of light, pithy comment, often spiced by barbs against sham and pretentiousness, for 34 years. But he wrote many books on his specialty and traveled the country giving talks at yacht clubs on his experiences, illustrated by motion pictures he had taken.

There was hardly a major ocean race here and abroad in which he was not a participant, usually as navigator. These included 17 of the biennial events to Bermuda and 11 passages in England's famous Fastnet Cup race. He sailed the Atlantic three times, the first time in 1928 in a race to Spain aboard the yacht Pinta.

Mr. Loomis, a lean, quiet-spoken man with a wry sense of humor, wrote in a fluid, easy-going style that belied the hard work that went into his efforts.

Known for "Under the Lee"

Writing under the pen name Spun Yarn after joining Yachting's editorial staff in 1934 under his mentor and friend, the late Herbert L. Stone, he made his column, "Under the Lee of the Longboat," an institution. It was continued until a month before his death.

Poor sportsmanship, carelessness and incompetence at sea were his targets. He created a humorous fictitious club, the Lee Rail Vikings, into which he pointedly elected those who failed to measure up to his standards. He consistently defended yachting against the encroachments of road and bridge builders and anyone else who threatened the free use of waterways.

He championed small-boat sailing at the United States Naval Academy and with an article, "Are There Any Sailors in the Navy?" spurred the academy into establishing an active sailing program. His writings appeared in many magazines besides Yachting, for which he was an associate editor. He was an associate editor also of the British publication Yachts and Yachting.

Mr. Loomis was born in Brooklyn, the son of Charles Battell Loomis, a writer, humorist and lecturer. His uncle was Harvey Worthington Loomis, a noted composer.

He attended schools in New York, Connecticut and New Jersey, but did not graduate from high school. Instead, he went to work for the Doubleday, Page Publishing Company in 1908 as an office boy in the editorial department of Country Life in America magazine. He soon developed an interest in writing and photography.

Magazines and the sea were to hold his enthusiasm thereafter, beginning with a five-month power boat trip to Florida as a photographer in 1921 for Motor Boating, for which he later became managing editor, and as a Naval Reserve quartermaster and ensign during World War I. His first Bermuda race was aboard a 110-foot wooden submarine chaser against five others that were homeward bound to New York. He was the navigator on the winning boat.

A civilian again and freelancing, he made a single-handed cruise from Long Island to New Brunswick, Canada, in a small open motor boat in 1920 on a story for Country Life. Then he turned to sailing craft and bought Hippocampus, a 28-foot yawl, in 1921. He cruised her to Panama and wrote his first book, "Cruise of the Hippocampus," published in 1922. That year he married Priscilla Lockwood of New York and again cruised to Panama, this time with his bride.

Another yacht that became a book subject was Hotspur, a Linton Rigg-designed, Casey Baldwin-built 32-foot cutter, which Mr. Loomis built in 1929 and which became famous through his writing. He owned her to his death. The books were "Hotspur's Cruise in the Aegean," and "The Hotspur Story."

Other books included "Ranging the Maine Coast," "Yachts Under Sail," the precursor of the many yachting picture books of today, and "Ocean Racing." The last named is being reprinted this spring by the Abercrombie & Fitch library.

Returned to Navy

In January, 1941, Mr. Loomis returned to active duty in the United States Naval Reserve with the rank of lieutenant commander, having been told that he was too old at 50 to hold the rank of lieutenant, which he had requested. After a severe illness, he ended World War II at the Office of History in Washington and was separated from the service in December, 1946, with the rank of captain.

Mr. Loomis lived in New York and Huntington, L. I. He is survived by his widow; a daughter, Mrs. Ward C. Campbell of Cold Spring Harbor, L.I., and three sons, Alfred Worthington Loomis of Cleveland; Robert Lockwood Loomis of New York, and Harvey Battell Loomis of New York.

A funeral service will be held tomorrow at 10 A.M. at St. James Episcopal Church, Madison Avenue and 71st Street.

Gen. H. Russell Drowne Jr., Insurance Brokers' Head, Dies

Brig. Gen. H. Russell Drowne Jr., board chairman of Russell Drowne, Inc., life and pension insurance brokers, died Sunday in New York Hospital. He was 70 years old and lived at 825 Fifth Avenue.

General Drowne, who had retired from the Army Reserve, was born in New York, the son of H. Russell Drowne and the former Louisa Webb Forsyth. He attended the Berkeley School in New York and graduated from the Hill School in Pottstown, Pa., and in 1920 from Princeton, where he was a member of the Ivy Club.

In World War I he served overseas as a first lieutenant with the 810th Pioneer Infantry. He then enlisted in Squadron A, New York National Guard, serving 20 years and rising to colonel.

In World War II he was executive officer of the 102d Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade at Luzon in the Philippines and also served in New Guinea. He won the Bronze Star. After the war, he commanded the 305th and then the 300th Antiaircraft Artillery Brigade of the Reserve, retiring in 1957 as a brigadier general.

General Drowne had been president of 825 Fifth Avenue Corporation. He was a former vice president of Rollins, Burdick, Hunter Company, Insurance brokers, and of Culver, Holyday, real estate brokers.

He was a former governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants in the State of New York and a former chairman of the membership committee. The general was a member of the Squadron A Association, Sons of the American Revolution, Society of the Cincinnati and the New England Society.

Milton C. Lightner, 78, Ex-Head Of Singer Co. and N.A.M., Dies

New Jersey Led Sewing Machine Concern, 1949-61, and Guided Diversification

Special to The New York Times

BAY HEAD, N. J., March 25 —Milton Clarkson Lightner, retired chairman of the Singer Company and a former president and chairman of the National Association of Manufacturers, died last night at his summer home here. He was 78 years old and lived at Heights Road in Ridgewood.

'Do-It-Yourself' Leader

Mr. Lightner began the post-war program that enabled the Singer Sewing Machine Company to diversify into the manufacture of other home appliances and industrial equipment and to achieve yearly sales of $1-billion.

Mr. Lightner was associated with the Singer Company in various executive capacities for 31 years, serving as its president from 1949 to 1958, and as chairman of the board from 1959 to 1961. He had been a director of the company for 40 years at his retirement in 1967.

When he became president of the N.A.M. at the end of 1957, he resigned as Singer president to devote his full time to the industry group. He looked upon the N.A.M. post as a "do-it-yourself job."

"If you don't do it, you will find someone else has done it and probably done it in a way you will not like," he said.

Mr. Lightner was a brown-eyed six-footer with a ready smile. His speech was deliberate and easy-going. Staff members of the N.A.M. described him as "brotherly." He was credited with patience and understanding, but associates said he could not be easily swayed once he embarked on anything he had decided was right.

Chased Pancho Villa

The executive was born in Detroit on April 11, 1890, the son of Edwin N. L. and Jane Cass Lightner. He graduated in 1910 from the University of Michigan, where he was active in the debating society, and from the Harvard Law School in 1913. He held honorary degrees from Clemson University and the University of Michigan.

Mr. Lightner began his career with the New York law firm of Carter, Ledyard & Milburn. But when Pancho Villa began raiding Texas border towns in 1916, he served with Squadron A of the National Guard force sent to repel the Mexican bandit. During World War I he was a Quartermaster Corps captain handling shipments sent overseas from New York.

After the war, he became a partner in the law firm of Ver Planck, Prince, Burlingame & Lightner. Among his clients was the Singer Company, whose head, Sir Douglas Alexander, persuaded him to become a director and vice president of Singer's marketing and distributing subsidiary in 1927.

For the next 20 years, Sir Douglas and Mr. Lightner worked closely together, with Sir Douglas concentrating on foreign operations and Mr. Lightner on domestic business.

In 1929, Mr. Lightner devised the offering of advanced courses in sewing at Singer Sewing Centers, a practice that promoted increased business. When Sir Douglas died in 1949, Mr. Lightner succeeded him as president of the company.

RICHARD ZIESING JR., EX-CURTIS EXECUTIVE

Richard Ziesing Jr., retired vice president of the Curtis Publishing Company, died yesterday, apparently of a heart attack, at his home in Cleveland. He was 72 years old.

At his retirement in 1959, Mr. Ziesing was general manager of advertising for the Ladies Home Journal. He had joined Curtis in 1930.

Mr. Ziesing was born in Cleveland on May 10, 1895 and was graduated from the University School there in 1913 and from Princeton University in 1917. For a time in World War I, he interrupted his education and became a Naval aviator.

Mr. Ziesing began his career in advertising in 1918 with the Fuller & Smith advertising agency in Cleveland. He was a vice president of the agency when he moved to Philadelphia to join Curtis.

Mr. Ziesing's first wife was the former Martha Darden, who died about 1950. About 10 years ago, he married Eleanor Bradley White.

Surviving, besides his widow, are two children, Richard Darden Ziesing and Mrs. Hugh Hanson, both of Philadelphia; a brother, Hibben Ziesing of Cleveland, and seven grandchildren.
